

The Good News about Buying a Home in Skagit County

OK, first, the bad news: 2007 has been marked by news stories of the collapse of the housing market in many formerly high-flying markets. Now the good news! Buying a house in Skagit County is still a great idea. In 2007 Skagit County has enjoyed continued positive home sales values. In fact, median home prices have increased steadily in Skagit County over the past 12 years.*

How does this translate to you, the homebuyer? There are strong indicators of continued growth in home values which mean positive home equity for you!* Sellers are very agreeable and interest rates are still low. Waiting to buy a home could cost you in the long run. Start building your home equity today! When it comes to choosing your title and escrow closing partner, make it the locally owned Guardian Northwest Title & Escrow.
